Save Your Child's Smile: Baby Teeth Matter!

Primary or baby teeth are important to a child's physical, social and emotional health. Baby teeth help children chew their food and aid in speech development.

To support dental health in Martin County, the Florida Department of Health offers a school-based dental sealant and oral health education program.

Registered dental hygienists from the Health Department visit Martin County Elementary Schools and with parental consent, provide oral health exams, tooth brushing instructions, fluoride varnish and dental sealants.

Services are free, regardless of income and are funded in part by the Children's Services Council of Martin County.
